

20th March 2020

Dear parents and carers

Identification of key workers

The most recent scientific advice on how to further limit the spread of COVID-19 is clear. If children can stay safely at home, they should, in order to limit the spread of coronavirus and to reduce their chances of catching the virus.

However, schools have been asked to provide care for pupils whose parents are identified as critical workers and who are critical to the Covid-19 response, and who cannot be safely cared for at home.

Priority will be given to children where both parents/carers are critical workers or where the sole parent/carer is a critical worker.

Could you please complete the survey below as soon as possible and submit at the latest Saturday 21st March at 12pm.

Parental Feedback Form

No parent whether they are a critical worker or not should assume that their child has a place in the emergency provision we are providing. We will get in touch with you to confirm the situation after we have considered the information provided to us by parents/carers and following a risk assessment based on the availability of staff.

The definition of a critical worker is provided on the next page.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your patience and understanding during these uncertain times.

Yours faithfully

Mrs C Roberts
Head Teacher

Definition of a key worker:Health and social care

This includes but is not limited to doctors, nurses, midwives, paramedics, social workers, care workers, and other frontline health and social care staff including volunteers; the support and specialist staff required to maintain the UK's health and social care sector; those working as part of the health and social care supply chain, including producers and distributors of medicines and medical and personal protective equipment.

Education and childcare

This includes nursery and teaching staff, social workers and those specialist education professionals who must remain active during the COVID-19 response to deliver this approach.

Key public services

This includes those essential to the running of the justice system, religious staff, charities and workers delivering key frontline services, those responsible for the management of the deceased, and journalists and broadcasters who are providing public service broadcasting.

Local and national government

This only includes those administrative occupations essential to the effective delivery of the COVID-19 response or delivering essential public services such as the payment of benefits, including in government agencies and arms length bodies.

Food and other necessary goods

This includes those involved in food production, processing, distribution, sale and delivery as well as those essential to the provision of other key goods (for example hygienic and veterinary medicines).

Public safety and national security

This includes police and support staff, Ministry of Defence civilians, contractor and armed forces personnel (those critical to the delivery of key defence and national security outputs and essential to the response to the COVID-19 pandemic), fire and rescue service employees (including support staff), National Crime Agency staff, those maintaining border security, prison and probation staff and other national security roles, including those overseas.

Transport

This includes those who will keep the air, water, road and rail passenger and freight transport modes operating during the COVID-19 response, including those working on transport systems through which supply chains pass.

Utilities, communication and financial services

This includes staff needed for essential financial services provision (including but not limited to workers in banks, building societies and financial market infrastructure), the oil, gas, electricity and water sectors (including sewerage), information technology and data infrastructure sector and primary industry supplies to continue during the COVID-19 response, as well as key staff working in the civil nuclear, chemicals, telecommunications (including but not limited to network operations, field engineering, call centre staff, IT and data infrastructure, 999 and 111 critical services), postal services and delivery, payments providers and waste disposal sectors.