Duke of Edinburgh Expedition

Last week our Duke of Edinburgh's Award students took to the hills of West Oxfordshire on expedition.

One team was completing their Bronze expedition assessment and the other team was on practice expedition for their Silver Award.

Both teams completed two full days walking and a night camping out including cooking for themselves and the teamwork and good spirit was wonderful.

The final expedition of the year - the assessment for the Silver team - will be during the week of the 4th July in Wales. Wish them luck!

Dali Art project

Dali class have been involved in the most amazing project with The University of Oxford Gardens Libraries and Museums.

The project 'Co-Curate' involved the History of Science Museum loaning Iffley students a museum cabinet and allowing them to choose items of the collection to be put on display at school.

The current display includes modern and historic calculators, including a 100 year old Lightening Machine.

The students in Dali have done a fantastic job putting this together with the museum and have even interviewed the Director of the Museum, Silke Akermann.

The cabinet will live at Iffley and will be used for future displays curated by other classes.

Poetry Competition - Mr White

Last week our SENCO, Mr White, spent an afternoon in London for an award ceremony: the Ginkgo Prize for Eco Poetry 2020 (delayed from last year due to the pandemic). Although Mr White is more involved in badger protection, his poem, called 'Skrik', was about the horror of whaling. It was Highly Commended by the judges, Poet Laureate Simon Armitage, and poet Jade Cuttle. Here is the link to the poem and anthology of winners:
